the Aizenstadt Murder Mystery.

The Story His Wife Told an " Evening World" Reporter.

An important discovery was made to-day which will probably lead to the detection and arrest of the murderers of Lazarus Alzenstadt. whose body was found last Monday concealed in a thicket near Fort Hamilton Avenue in New Utrecht.

LAZARUS AIZENSTADT.

Louis Warschawsky, of 51 Forsyth street who makes his living as an occasional real estate agent, and now and then as schatchen" by getting a commission for effecting marriages, was discovered by an EVENING WORLD reporter to be one of the agents who negotiated the sale of the farm which Aizenstadt was on his way to purchase when he was murdered.

Warchawsky has been away from his home since last Monday evening. But his wife this morning told an Evening World reporter the following story:
"About a month ago two men called on my husband. One of them was about twentyfive years old, rather stout, and had a little farm somewhere out of town, and had been brought to my husband by the stout young man, who, together with another man, was acting as agent for the prospective purchaser.

"My husband also had a partner in this business, and they told the stranger that they knew of a farm which he would like. After that I heard nothing about the affair for a long time, until last Monday, when my husband told me that he suspected his partner had pocketed the whole commission, amounting to about $250, for the sale of the " With this suspicion he went to see the purchaser, who lived somewhere on East Broadway, and was there informed that the party had not been home since Saturday of ast week. My husband then went to his partner's house and learned that the latter had moved away. Neither could the stout young man be tound. " While going about the streets my husband came across the man who had acted as an agent for the purchaser. He told my husband that this man had bought the farm, but he did not know whether the commission had

"Incidentally, he also said that the stranger was a fugitive from justice, having run away from Russia with 40,000 roubles, and that when he found that he was getting too well known in New York, he decided to run

I don't know where he went, but I do know that the ticket for the place he went to cost $2.75. He said by the same way, and the latest of the place he went to cost $2.75. From all these circumstances there can be no doubt that the purchaser living on East Broadway was Aizesniadt; that the stout young man was Solomon, who lived with Alen Sadt at 100 East Broadway, and it is not improbable that the two strangers who called An Aged Chilian Woman Soon to at Alzenstadi's room last Saturday evening and afterwards went away with him were
